Roulette

Roulette is played by placing a bet on a single number or variety of numbers, black, or red. The large payoffs that are possible for small wagers always stimulate the interest of the expert as well as the novice player. It is a fun and easy game to learn and play.

Rules

Roulette, the classy game with European origins, involves a fancy spinning wheel that contains slots numbered 1 to 36, and well as two additional slots, 0 and 00. A white ball is spun around the wheel as the wheel rotates, and when the ball loses speed, it drops, falling into one of the numbered slots. Of the slots 1 to 36, half are black and half are red. The 0 and 00 slots are green. The purpose of the game is to try and guess which numbered slot the ball will fall into next. You place your bets on the roulette layout according to where you think the ball might land. There are numerous bets you can place on a roulette wheel, but all bets fall into one of two categories: inside bets and outside bets. You can place as many different bets, and as many different types of bets as you want for each spin of the wheel, as long as your bets do not exceed the table limit.
